

Blacksmith - by Sarah Schmidt

She walks quietly pink raging strength within like William like Wallace followed by lions with the iron hooves of horses such emblematic strength stronger still when Wallace with his pride treads green glens in silence

tongue of lion and men and shoe licking dew and chosen tones from landscape forming interior worlds, that muscular creator of guttural calls, it curls, carries arabesques of colour and a tumbling surf of cross-hatched conte

cold Gaelic air beats firm outline to her body she is fine-boned, intelligent form pink hot strength within the force of a whole pride gifted to her the landscape she crosses, wild and calm lime and tan accents, the sharper of the palette an otherwise medium tenor of colour Scottish grey-greens blanketing vast lands canvas to those flint-chipped pixels of lime and tan oatmeal digestive tones, lichen colours also,
from granite passes, those for souls to cross pitted leather too grey and pocked arching over rocks in pairs like children to mothers, seeking reflection,
in the Other,
the surface

Mottled rock
meets peppered shoe visual synchronicity chameleon body scales, lichen crusts, small cobbled stones packed together scales – medieval walls much stone and green and lizard skin warm leather and gizzard shoe 'shoes lining the wardrobe like motionless lizards'

Souls or washed feet can pass this way the dance between profound and prosaic
circling the shores of Loch Lomond Mc vitie's cardboard edges supporting woolen armpit carried for paddock picnic, prosaic, these shoes tread between archetypes, modernity and the whitest walls her walk continues through veils of fog by silty edges, by bog fine marks and steps marks upright like Anne and Callanish stone applied again and again to paper tooth until voice reaches the place of thought fjord, drumming up waves of philosophy

On one continent an artist shifts feet around a studio a dance of reflection rhythm, stepping forward and around choreographed like yogic pelvic circles scraping comes from the hands sometimes furiously often softly the full range of pitch and feeling these paper places keyed with whispers and intensity, poem rich stories and understanding longing, sweet and sharp obstacles

Painting, drawing in my world immutable as core as breathing, bathing warm air slows through the body collapsing, spreading into belly featherdown spreading down the spine gentle breast-stroking again swimming down into warm straw cradle breath fills all the space glide along the bottom, the depths warm here afore rising to surface surface tension, mark-making cool, grey, loch waters

Integrity saddles the breath reaches every axis soaks through my practice and my being, chains my being frightens others integrity is material to this art is fluid and form clay and slip assembling body and surface it is there in the evenness of my work that lives there with the scratchy and tenuous the linear aggression rapid flicks matched with careful inflection sensuous palettes and marks gliding stretches of paint that permeate the eye elixirs gestures of honesty, truth, directness

Witness the intensity, so true
in every page, every dimpled sheet nothing for the hell of it a myriad of strokes, endearing layers, permanence.
surface tension there, loose, suspension of colored flecks on sized ground dapples held in thoughts samba of stipples gathered gently but swiftly metal filings to magnet quick dashed marks packed and pressed into softness tight wool bales, pressed powder even, soft-solid, breath-filled space

I am Anne
 I am still Scottish, sandy haired lass sandy haired Australian in the beach blues and golds that sing so vibrantly this series Australian in the eucalypt fortress the studio where oils and vapors rise and stir camphoraceous gum distillations, linseed, white spirit from the pine paint freckled on papers, then spatula driven, into the supine sleep of the loch, drifty horizontals, a Scott, an Antipodean, borders sketched together in the mind, two grassy spaces green geographies scratchy blades in linen tones plains and reeds, tussocky spaces not coastal,
 it is the moors Anne-tip-o-de-Anne she breast-strokes the coastal rips into view she pulls them with her pause
 by Bass Strait tumble weed dances, there is the coastal texture, that I can see,
 even if it is not there, in Anne's story,
 or intent,
 at the moment of breath and pause where the countries fuse, the bodies join, in Anne and Scottish grasses turpentine, air and grasses sable brushes beneath fragrant cedar beams they frame the heavens of this studio which transports one to the intensity of human living

All captured in Anne's marks on paper and there is Doug in marks on Anne's paper in a candid, true, homage and conversation an obvious choice of mimicry determined, conscious, iron will,
 deliberate,
 intimate,
 fusing and diffuse with ample rationale and embodiment of love there in the surface melodies and tension, and the soul's travel, moving through ambrosial patina of artwork surface like languid fingers of lovers meandering through hair at shivering neck the pubic etched scratchiness of Baldessin, such a quality is coming but doesn't arrive at the last moment conte rounded, water-pool softened, breath, heart-beat, fuchsia, Gaelic song

Her Art, some days it is like conversation,
 carve change but that only loops upon itself in hopeful, talented phrases well articulated, reasoned complete there in all its fecundity sublimity, waiting,
 to be accessed.
 between times can only exist as meditations yet purposeful and ripe look how nicely it sits pegged neatly into its place in the world blonde framed cranberry hues indigos enriching the most important worlds Our everyday.
